

ELBERT HUBBARD CHARMS A CROWD

Unique Literary Genius Speaks in Davenport Before Big Audience.

Elbert Hubbard, the most unique figure in the literary world today, delivered a brilliant address last evening in Davenport at the Palmer School of Chiropractic before a crowded house. He discussed right living and thinking and their relation to good health.

His lecture was filled with bright epigrams delivered in his own characteristic manner. His remarkable flow of language held his audience spell-bound, for behind his exceptional oratory was a wealth of common sense, dressed in the most attractive manner.

CONVINCING TESTIMONY

Given by Many Rock Island People.

Experiences told by Rock Island people—

Those who have had weak kidneys—Who used Dean's Kidney Pills—Who found the remedy effective—Such statements prove merit.

You might doubt an utter stranger. You must believe Rock Island people.

Here's Rock Island proof. Verify it. Read. Investigate. Be convinced. You'll find why Rock Island folks believe in Dean's.

"C. M. Fisher, 332 First avenue, Rock Island, Ill., says: 'Dean's Kidney Pills have certainly done fine work in my case and I am pleased to confirm the statement I gave in 1909 recommending them. I suffered from rheumatic twinges in my back and my limbs were stiff. At night I did not sleep well and in the morning I felt all dried out. When I saw Dean's Kidney Pills advertised, I got a supply at the Harper House pharmacy and they gave me immediate relief. The action of my kidneys was regulated and all the other troubles were removed.'"

POIRET, PARIS HIGH PRIEST OF COLOR, HERE TO SHOW U. S. WOMEN HOW TO DRESS

Paul Poiret, his wife and some of his gowns.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 15.—Paul Poiret of Paris, "the high priest of color and the master builder of gowns," with Mme. Poiret, is now touring the United States. He is here to show American women how to dress and is making the demonstration on the cinematographic screen.

The women in Poiret's pictures are garbed in raiment wonderful, peculiar and individual. Here walks one in lamplike gown whose "hoop" sways with the motions of her body. There another model preens herself before a mirror and shows the basic principles of the trousers skirt.

The colored slides show some wonderful combinations—women in blue serge and green trimming, in scarlet and black, in purple and white, in pink with an overdress of white and in other shades that cause dressmakers to gasp with delight.

"The gown is like the woman," said Poiret. "Both evade analysis. The gown is the flower of fantasy, the fruit of caprice, a bit of ribbon, a scrap of lace, touch of color. My garments show no workmanship and it is because of this that they are different."

"The beauty in styles should underline the meaning of the features, bring out the grace and the beauty of the wearer and accentuate it. All the talent of the artist rests in the revelation of the woman."

"To be in style that does not mean to wear diamonds and ropes of pearls. I would like just as well to see a woman wrapping her curls with bank notes as to see her loaded with jewels. The rope of pearls seems to be the mark of social standing. It is not fair, for pearls are not becoming to every woman. It is the elegance that should dominate, not the cost."

"The gown should be the elegance of simplicity. The charm comes from the very point where it eludes. There is no theory, there is no rule, there can be no rule. It is more feminine to be logical, hence more charming."

"Men are better dressmakers than women because they like solidity. Women are too rich in imagination. They put too much lace, too many tassels and beads and penwipers and roses on the gown, and the general outlines are hidden, the personality is lost."

"They use pastel shades, which look faded and characterless, whereas if they used very bright colors, strong shades and in small quantity they would achieve creations. They are too much for schools and nothing for feeling. Their gowns are never simple enough."

Several Chicago dressmakers are quite outspoken against Poiret and his creations. "Simplicity," repeated one of them. "His gowns are simple as Christmas trees. Poiret's only excuse for coming to this country is to

TEACHING OF SEX HYGIENE TALKED

Question of Introducing It in the Schools Discussed at Charities Conference.

IS DIVISION OF SENTIMENT

Chicago Priest Holds Subject Fraught With Terrible Conclusions—Hirsch President.

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 15.—Consideration of the question whether sex hygiene should be taught in the public schools was reserved for the closing session of the Illinois conference of charities, and its discussion brought expressions from Dr. Edith B. Lowry of St. Charles, who spoke affirmatively, and from Dr. John Webster Melody of Washington and Rev. Thomas O'Malley of Loyola university, Chicago. All agreed the young should be informed on the sex question, but differed when it came to the point of diffusing this knowledge.

Dr. Lowry, who favored its teaching in the public schools, considered the home the primary place for instruction in sex hygiene, but when parents, through ignorance or other reasons, withheld the knowledge so important to the growing child, she considered it should be taught in the school.

Dr. Melody of the Catholic university took the position the movement to introduce the teaching of sex hygiene into the school is only another expression of the effort to establish in the school the theatre for the discharge of duties and offices heretofore restricted to the sacred precincts of the home.

Rev. Father O'Malley of Chicago said: "There is no subject under discussion in America that is fraught with such terrible conclusions. We know that in the colleges and high schools of the country there are conditions that are bad. There is only one way to rule the animal in man and that is by religion. Religion has held man in the past, is holding him in the present and will hold him in the future."

Father O'Malley considered instruction on the subject in the school opposed to the best interest of the child. An animated discussion followed in which many joined. La Salle was decided on for the 1914 conference.

IOWANS WILL DEDICATE SHAFT TO CHIEF KEOKUK

Keokuk, Iowa, Oct. 15.—With Mrs. William C. Story, president-general of the national society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in attendance, Iowa members of that organization will dedicate the statue in memory of the Indian chief, Keokuk, in Rand park, on the afternoon of Wednesday, Oct. 22. Conspicuous at the dedication ceremony will be John Keokuk, great-grandson of the chief, who is coming from Oklahoma, bringing a message from the Sac and Fox tribes, over which his grandfather formerly held sway. Other prominent people will be in attendance, including Lorado Taft, the sculptor of world renown, who has evinced a lively interest in the Keokuk monument since the work was first started. Mrs. Story, John Keokuk and Mr. Taft all have important places on the dedication program.

The unveiling of the statue is to be held in connection with the state conference of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which convenes here Oct. 21, and continues for the two days following. A tablet in memory of the early Iowa trails will also be dedicated, in which a prominent part will be played by Mrs. H. R. Howell of Des Moines, state regent of the D. A. R., and Edgar R. Harlan, also of the capital city, curator of the Iowa State Historical society. The financing and successful completion of the monument is the work of Keokuk women.

The pleasant purgative effect experienced by all who use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, and the healthy condition of the body and mind which they create, makes one feel joyful. Sold by all druggists.—(Adv.)
